Root canal treatment is a popular dental surgery designed to eliminate infection from inside a tooth, ease discomfort and help keep your natural smile. At Redditch Dental Care, we attempt to make every stage of your treatment as comfortable and uncomplicated as possible.

Root Canal Therapy: What Is It?

Root canal treatment, also known as endodontic treatment, is needed when the soft tissue inside a tooth, called the dental pulp, becomes inflamed or infected. Deep decay, fractures, trauma, or repetitive dental procedures can all cause this.

What Are the Signs You May Need a Root Canal?

Typical symptoms may include:

- Persistent toothache
- Sensitivity to hot or cold beverages
- Pain when biting or chewing
- Swelling around the tooth or gums
- The tooth's discoloration or darkening
- A tiny patch or pimple on the gum

An infected tooth may occasionally show no symptoms at all. This is why frequent dental check-ups are vital for recognizing problems early.

What Happens During Root Canal Treatment?

Your dentist will initially inspect the afflicted tooth and may conduct an X-ray to evaluate the extent of the infection. Local anesthetic is then given to numb the area, allowing you stay comfortable throughout the process.

The Dentist Redditch root canal carefully creates a small incision in the tooth to access the diseased pulp. The injured tissue is removed, and the inside of the tooth is carefully cleaned. Once the tooth has been cleaned, it is filled and sealed to help prevent further infection. Depending on the condition and strength of the tooth, you may additionally need a dental crown to provide further protection.

Is Root Canal Treatment Painful?

Many patients are concerned about pain during root canal therapy. The majority of patients have little to no discomfort throughout the surgery thanks to modern technology and an efficient local anesthetic. It is typical to experience some slight discomfort or sensitivity afterwards, although this normally improves within a few days.
